Dear all

We have been thankful today for some dry weather and the opportunity for children to play outside! I'm sure you've appreciated a more pleasant school run too.

The spring term (yes, it is the spring term, and spring will come eventually!) is always a time when we are able to make great progress with teaching and learning. This year is no exception with a great start made on regular routines and timetables after the (very enjoyable) disruption of Christmas festivities.

We have exciting news to come of a new charity initiative with an organisation called Read for Good who support children in hospital by providing author visits and books. Please look out for more information coming soon.

As ever, my best wishes for a happy weekend.

Clare Pankhania
